LAST TRIBUTE PAID THE DEAD

Large Number Attend Funeral
Services of Late Dr. O. P.
Dillion

MANY FLORAL OFFERINGS

The Local Physicians Attended
in Body—Funeral Discourse
Very Impressive

The funeral services of the late Dr. O. P. Dillon, who met his untimely death Sunday morning at the Main street crossing which was held this afternoon at the late residence in North Main street, was one of the largest and most impressive funerals which has occurred in this city of recent years.

Not only the large residence was packed, but the yard was full of people and some were standing out in the pavement, who had gathered to pay their last tributes to the prominent physician.

The physicians of this city turned out in a body to the services and followed their brother in the profession to his last resting place.

The casket was heaped with beautiful floral offerings, presented by the doctor's many relatives and friends.

The funeral discourse, delivered over the remains by Rev. R. W. Aberley, was a source of consolation to the friends and family, as he took occasion to remark that it is always a wise thing to be prepared for eternity.

The remains were taken to the East Hill cemetery, where they were laid to rest. The following friends acted as pall bearers: Samuel L. Trabue, William Wilson, Gay Abercrombie, Judge Will M. Sparks, U. F. Edgerton and Will Bowen.

A change in the firm is now under way, and Olin Bodine will assume full proprietorship of the business. For several years the son has conducted the affairs at the store.

TOURING INDIANA SECURING TALENT

John McCarty Now Doing Missionary Work for a New York
Carnival Company

John McCarty, an old Rushville boy, was here today visiting friends. For ten years he has been a resident of Philadelphia, Penn., but he is wide awake for a denizen of the "sleepy burg." Mr. McCarty is now touring Indiana securing talent for the Hurtig & Seaman Carnival Co., of New York City, the largest carnival company ever organized. Hoosiers excel in this line, as in all others, for Indiana furnishes more members of the "grift" than any other State save possibly New York State.

According to recent estimates there are 8,000,000 telephone girls in the world.

RUSH COUNTY MAN DIED AT HIS HOME IN KOKOMO

John Macy was Born in Carthage and was Civil War Veteran

John L. Macy, who was buried at Kokomo Sunday, was born in Carthage, sixty-eight years ago. His parents were Francis and Huldah Macy, excellent Quaker folk. He grew to manhood in the little town and it was there that he answered President Lincoln's first call for volunteers, and enlisted in the 16th Indiana Infantry, serving with the regiment until it was mustered out at the close of the war. Early in the seventies he was united in marriage with Elvira Overman, and soon afterwards they moved to Kokomo. Mrs. Macy died in 1892. Four children survive.

Mr. Macy was well known in this city, where he had many friends among the old soldiers.

SECOND CHAPTER OF ANINIAS CLUB

Denizens of Farmers Organizing and Will Ask for a Charter—
a By-Law

The farmers at Farmers are forming an Ananias club and will apply to the Rushville organization for a charter. In the by-laws of the new club is found the following paragraph: "Be it further resolved that the port and purpose of this organization is to discuss live questions from Jersey cattle to Belgian hares and to handle without gloves all "rare-bits" of gossip."

Congressman James E. Watson has presented to the Graham high school a fine book, entitled, "The Life of John Paul Jones," including the return of his remains to this country, and an account of the ceremonies in honor of the noted seaman.

Hon. J. K. Gowdy presented two medallions, one to the Graham school and another to the Jackson school. The medallion has on one side the bust of John Paul Jones and on the other the famous flagship of Jones.

Eastern Publishers Make Announcement of her "Ideas of a Plain Country Woman"

Mrs. Juliet V. Strauss, the "Country Contributor" has many friends in Rushville, some of her life-long acquaintances living here, who will be pleased to learn that one of the leading publishers in the country is putting out a book by this woman of literary talent in things domestic. Her daughter, Mrs. Claude Ott, formerly lived here in North Perkins street.

In a foreword to the volume, the Indianapolis News says in part: "It is unnecessary, of course, to remind readers of the News that Mrs. Strauss' work is especially notable for its cheerful spirit, its wholesome optimism, its homeliness and common sense. She is a resident of Rockville, Ind., and here, at her home, known as 'Grouch Place,' she has done all her writing. Her philosophy has been summed up by a correspondent of the News, who said that her doctrine is 'to get happy and stay that way.' She is a disciple of joy and all her essays reflect the spirit of her life and environment."

CAMPBELL WON OUT OVER JESSUP

Richmond Preacher Successful in Wayne County Primary Yesterday

Wayne county had a big time at their first Republican primary election yesterday. Despite the general feeling that apathy existed and a light vote would be cast, over 3700 out of a poll of a few votes over 4000 cast ballots, signifying their choice.

The keenest and most interesting fight was the candidate to carry the Wayne county banner into the Sixth district congressional convention. Rev. J. O. Campbell, the Christian preacher was successful in the election, leading Jessup by the small margin of 125 votes. Yencer was the third candidate seeking endorsement. The judgeship fight between H. O. Fothe present incumbent and Hon. O. E. Shiveley, was also a lively battle.

TWO MINUTE SERMON FROM LIFE

How a Man Favoring Enforcement of Law to the Letter
Conducts Himself—Consistency, Thou Art a Jewel

He was one of those blue eyed, long bearded patriarchs, whose next thought to home was law enforcement and a good soul he is, too. Many the time we have heard him preach it by the hour. And he was sincere. All of us are—at least while we are exhorting and sermonizing. (N. B. "Gentle Reader." This is a "real" character living here in Rushville.) There is an old saying, which probably gained favor because it had a good jingle and swing to it, but nevertheless, it carries a thought that makes a good maxim to live by. It runs something after this order:

MORE PAY FOR CITY MARSHAL

A Number of Citizens Favor Increasing Salary of the "Best Ever"

TALK OF ANOTHER OFFICER

Has Caused Several to Suggest Paying Price Fair Compensation for his Work

A number of the prominent business men of Rushville, irrespective of politics, are contemplating presenting a petition to the city council asking that the salary of City Marshal Price be increased.

For the past few weeks there has been a deal of agitation relative to the employing of an additional man for the force, it being claimed that the work falling on the city Marshal's shoulders was quite strenuous.

Hardly a night passes but what he is called out and much of the time during the day is spent making the usual rounds and in summoning people for the trials in the several courts.

There is danger in being an officer, if the officer is good one, and will take long chances as City Marshal Price has on several occasions. Only last week he escaped being shot by Alec Palmer, by knocking the latter down when he came at him with a loaded and cocked pistol.

The people of this city are indeed satisfied with the enforcement of the laws since Mr. Price has been on the force. His word has been received as law by the evil doers, and gambling and open saloons on Sundays and after hours soon became a thing of the past when he put on the star. It required no little effort and many long tedious hours of hard work to accomplish these things, and now the citizens feel that it would not only be a mark of appreciation to increase the officer's salary, but they feel he is deserving of it.

Under present conditions the cost of the police of this city is far below the average; to put another man on would mean an additional fifty dollars a month. One third of this amount would be a suitable and appropriate increase for the best marshal Rushville ever had, and a big saving to the tax payers, compared to old police salary lists, when we had three and four officers and less enforcement of the laws.

A curious barometer used in Germany and Switzerland consists of a jar of water with a frog and a little step ladder in it. When the frog comes out of the water and sits on the steps it is said infallibly to foretell rain.

Fishes have no eyelids and necessarily sleep with their eyes open; they swallow their food whole, having no dental machinery. Frogs, toads and serpents never take food except that which they are certain is alive.

WATSON'S OFFICE WAS AN INTELLIGENCE OFFICE

Many Came Seeking Members of the Far Famed "Watson Beauty Bunch"

The dispersing of the members of the Watson Beauty Bunch is now under way. Last week when the word was given out that the headquarters would be removed to Indianapolis, the local offices were converted into an intelligence or employment office and several came seeking stenographers.

As result Miss Hollie Mock is now employed in the auditor's office of the I. & C. traction general offices here and Miss Nancy Hogsett went to the insurance offices of Folsom, the "Talk it Over" man. Nearly all the other girls have offers under consideration—offers of position, of course.

Those who "Sunk" Money in Buena Oil Field will not Soon Forget

Another company has been organized to bore for oil in the Buena field, says the Greensburg Review, and the promoters are now busy at tempting to sell stock. We imagine the visions of the freckled face of one O'Connell that will arise before the people of that section when they are approached on the proposition, and what they will say to the promoters will never reach the eyes of the public through the newspapers, as it will not do to print.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY AFLOAT

It is Asserted That Spurious
Half Dollars were Found
Here

THEY ARE SERIES OF 1905

Coin Had a Very Good Ring but Tarnishes Quickly—Can be Bent

If you are in a position where you handle much silver coin or are called upon to make change frequently you had better keep a sharp lookout for a counterfeit half dollar that is in circulation here. During the past few days several bad coins of this denomination have turned up, and those who accepted them as genuine realized afterwards that the deception was a very dangerous one and was evidently put out by some one who has a very good idea of chemistry.

The money is the series of 1905, and is so nearly like the genuine in appearance that few persons would recognize it in the regular order of business. The coin has a very good ring but is deficient when put up against another coin that is genuine.

In profile, it is perfect but tarnishes quickly, and when grasped between the thumb and finger can be bent slightly in the center.

The metal in the counterfeit is considerable lighter than that in the genuine, but there is probably a number of them in circulation here, as several have turned up in the past day or two.

PROMINENT MAN TO ADDRESS MEETING

S. M. Cooper, the Man with a Message, will Speak Next Sunday

A message and the messenger are vitally related. The value of the one depends upon the character of the other. Because of this fact the Men's Big Meeting at the United Presbyterian church on next Sunday afternoon will be a meeting worthy of a large audience.

S. M. Cooper, who is to address the men at this time, is not only one of Cincinnati's most prominent business men, but he is a broad minded man of rare intellect and culture, and is considered one of the strongest laymen in the Christian church.

His address at the Main Street Christian church in this city a few weeks ago on "The Problems of Life" was a masterpiece of wisdom and eloquence and the committee in charge of the Men's Big Meeting were so impressed with the man and his message that he was immediately secured to speak on next Sunday.

WAITED TOO LONG

Thomas Mills Had Often Promised to Quit Carrying So Much Money.

INVITED HIS OWN MURDER

Wealthy Stockman Whose Cruel Death Has Shocked the State Had Long Tempted Robbers.

It Was His Constant Habit to Carry Large Sums of Money Around With Him.

Quincy, Ind., Feb. 11.—The weapon with which Thomas Mills, wealthy stockman, was killed has not yet been found. The supposition is that it was hidden by the murderer after the crime was committed. The officers, too, think it might be possible that Emory Cassell, charged with the murder, had a confederate, and they are working along that line.

Thomas Mills invited his own murder. For years it has been known in Morgan and Owen counties, and even at Indianapolis, that he was in the habit of carrying a large amount of money about with him. Once he had as much as $10,000 in his pockets for several days. Those who knew him best say there never was a time that he did not have in his pockets anywhere from $200 to $2,000. He had been warned several times that the carrying of so much money would tempt someone to rob if not murder him, but he always laughed at the warning.

The day before he started on his fatal trip he had $1,800, and the man with whom he lived at Eminence told him he had better put the money in the bank. Mr. Mills said he would do so "some time." But he waited too long. Of that $1,800 about $190 in bills, gold and silver and about $300 in notes, checks and drafts were found on his body. He was robbed of between $1,200 and $1,300, in addition to being murdered.

The authorities say they have a strong case of circumstantial evidence against Cassell. His brothers and friends, however, believe in his innocence.

GAVE UP STRUGGLE

In Fear of Losing His Reason, Frank Roots Kills Himself.

Connersville, Ind., Feb. 11.—Francis T. Roots, fifty years old, a financier and one of the best-known citizens in Indiana, shot and killed himself with a revolver at his home here.

Mr. Roots was in declining health and had just returned home from Battle Creek, Mich., where he had been in the hope of improving his health.

About two months ago Mr. Roots retired as the head of the Farmers' and Merchants' Trust company of this city. He recently organized the State bank of Glenwood, a small town ten miles west of here, and he was its president. He was connected with several business enterprises here, at Muncie and Indianapolis. It is estimated that he was worth at least $200,000. Mr. Roots was once talked of for governor by his Republican friends, but he refused to run.

In the dead man's hand was found a note hurriedly written on scratch paper, which read:

"Dear Maud and Clarence—I cannot live to curse your lives. My reason is going and so must I. I forgive my enemies. FRANK."

Mr. Roots leaves a widow, who was Miss Sallie Maud Hellman of Evansville, to whom he was married in 1880, and a son, Clarence Roots, who is an attorney of Connersville, and who is connected with many of his father's interests. Mr. Roots's condition was at no time regarded as serious, and his friends felt that he exaggerated his condition; that all he needed was to take a rest, and that he had worked himself into this nervous condition and so could not sleep.

Fatal Runaway Accident.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 11.—A horse attached to a sleigh became frightened at an automobile and five members of the Lambrook family were thrown out. Mrs. Emma Lambrook, fifty-one years old, mother of the young men, and wife of J. H. Lambrook, is dead. She suffered concussion of the brain by striking the street, and did not regain consciousness after removal to St. Joseph hospital. J. H. Lambrook also suffered concussion of the brain, but it is thought he will recover.

The total number of laborers imported from Europe on the Isthmian canal during 1906 and 1907 was 9,914.

Summary Conversion.

Hawaiians all became Christians through the simple process of an edict—kapoo—of one of the sturdy old Kamehamehas. The worthy king, observing that it was easier to kill an enemy with a rifle than with a club and that the rifle was the invention of the Christians, took a short cut through the theological mazes of the missionaries who were trying to convert his subjects and announced that all Hawaiians were from that moment Christians. As he added that he would knock on the head any who objected the thing was done as fast as his couriers could deliver his message to his loving subjects.—New York World.

TREASON IN THE HOUSE

Mr. Leake Was Hissed by His Fellow Democrats in Congress.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, chairman of the committee on finance, opened the debate in the senate on his bill to provide an emergency currency. He was listened to with great attention by Republicans and Democrats alike, while in the galleries there was a large audience. Among others was J. Pierpont Morgan, who remained throughout the delivery of the speech.

During the day Senator Foraker made a reply to the president's statement concerning the use of appointing power for political purposes, and had letters read showing the president's attitude in one case. Senator Depew defended the course of the secretary of the treasury in depositing public funds in New York banks. The criminal code bill was again considered.

A brief but fiery speech by Mr. Leake of New Jersey, in which he outlined his opposition to William J. Bryan as a candidate for the presidency, relieved somewhat the monotony of debate on the Indian appropriation bill in the house of representatives. Mr. Leake charged Mr. Bryan with taking the big stick from the president, leaving the latter only a big slipper, and he further charged the Democrats in the house with having usurped the right of free action of the delegates to the Denver convention by nominating Mr. Bryan in advance. His remarks were greeted with hisses from the Democratic side of the house.

Considerable progress was made with the Indian appropriation bill, which was amended so that the commissioner of Indian affairs before he carries out the policy of abandonment of reservation schools shall investigate the question fully and report the house at its next session.

In the Interests of Economy.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The house committee on postoffices and post roads has virtually agreed to recommend adversely all bills and department estimates increasing the salaries of postoffice employees for the next fiscal year. The committee feels that the estimated postal deficit of $10,500,000 for the next fiscal year will be largely increased by falling revenues, and in view of this fact and of the substantial increases granted last year, has practically decided that the raising of salaries cannot be countenanced at this time.

THE McDONALD CASE

Mr. Lewis's Plea for Defendant Attracted Much Attention.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—The final plea in behalf of Mrs. Dora McDonald, on trial for the alleged murder of Webster Guerin, was delivered by Attorney Benjamin Shaffner and J. Hamilton Lewis. The latter's speech proved such an attraction to the public that extra details of police were necessary to keep the corridors clear, and finally a riot call was sent to the East Chicago Avenue station. One woman who was denied admittance to the courtroom became so excited that she struck a policeman in the face and was arrested.

Attorney Lewis emphasized the sex of the defendant in his address to the jury. "The man who makes the same rule for a woman as for a man or who claims to understand her, not only shows his inexperience, but also how unfair he is," was one of his arguments.

Mr. Taft in Missouri.

Kansas City, Feb. 11.—William H. Taft, secretary of war, was given a memorable ovation by a large throng in Convention hall last night when he was the guest of honor and principal speaker at the most elaborate banquet ever attempted in this city, given by the association of Young Republicans of Missouri and attended by 1,200 persons, many of whom came from Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and distant Missouri cities. The demonstration accorded Secretary Taft when he entered the banquet hall and again when he rose to speak, has never been surpassed by the welcome given any public man in the history of this city.

Repartee of the Shop.

"I never was so insulted in my life!" said the girl with the brown eyes indignantly.

"Explain further," was the request. "Why, you know Fido chewed up the muff to that set of gray furs of mine, and so I went into a shop today to see if I could find a muff that would replace it. I told the clerk what I wanted. He couldn't find anything that would suit, so he called another clerk. This one hunted high and low, he dragged out muffs till they heaped the counter, but he couldn't find one that would match. Finally he called the proprietor, a fat, stuffy man, who came waddling down the aisle and said, 'What is the trouble?'"

"I can't make a match," I said almost tearfully.

"Why, that's funny," he said in a hatefully patronizing manner. "What's the matter with the men?"—New York Press.

The Bonds.

"I want to get rid of some bonds." "Out of my line," replied the lawyer. "But these are matrimonial bonds," rejoined the caller, putting a different face on the matter.—Philadelphia Ledger.

When we are happy we seek those we love. In sorrow we turn to those who love us.—Cecil Raleigh.

GRAND LARCENY CHARGED

New York County Grand Jury Takes Action in Case of Returning Banker and Promoter.

Other Indictments Have Been Ordered in Connection With Banking Affairs.

New York, Feb. 11.—The grand jury of New York county, which has been investigating certain business transactions involving some of the banks with which Charles W. Morse, the organizer of the American Ice company and the Consolidated Steamship company, until recently was identified, has returned five indictments. Three of these indictments had to do with liquor tax cases, while two indictments charged grand larceny.

The indictments were not made public, but in asking that a good-sized ball bond be required, District Attorney Jerome stated to the court that two charges of grand larceny were laid against "a man now on his way over here" from Europe. Following the court proceedings it was stated authoritatively that the man referred to by Mr. Jerome was Charles W. Morse, who sailed for Liverpool a week ago Saturday on the Campania, but is now returning upon the advice of his counsel. Mr. Morse is a passenger on the Cunarder Etruria, due here late next Saturday. The grand jury, it is learned, has ordered other indictments in connection with its investigation into banking affairs.

When the jury appeared before Justice Dowling in the supreme court, District Attorney Jerome said: "Your honor, two of those papers in which I would like to have bail fixed. I would suggest $20,000 on one of them and nothing on the other."

Justice Dowling looked through the indictments and replied: "I suggest that the bail be fixed at $10,000 on each of them." This was agreeable to Mr. Jerome.

Among the matters which the grand jury looked into was a transaction in which two notes for $200,000 figured.

The federal grand jury, which also has been investigating the banking situation, concluded its day's session without handing down any indictments.

ANOTHER MERGER

Moving Picture Business of the World Now in Combine.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—The legal wars which Thomas Edison, the inventor, has participated in with moving picture machine manufacturers and dealers for the past nine years, have been settled, it has been learned, through the formation in Buffalo of an $8,000,000 combination to control the entire moving picture business of the world. The moving picture business of the country which this combination controls represents an investment, it is said, of $50,000,000, with 4,200 show places. In addition to the manufacturing and show places the combination will control what is termed 100 rental places, where films are leased. A complete understanding has been reached, and in lieu of the settlement of the legal battle in which he has indulged with the manufacturers, Mr. Edison will receive from the combination $200,000 a year royalty in return for which he is to permit no other concern to use any of his patents, without which films cannot be made.

The American Supremacy.

London, Feb. 11.—Tommy Burns, the American heavyweight pugilist, last night knocked out Jack Palmer of Newcastle, the English champion, in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a 20-round contest for the heavyweight championship. Some 2,000 persons saw the fight, which took place at a big music hall on the East Side, but it was a one-sided affair from the sound of the gong until the middle of the fourth round, when Palmer, on his knees, was finally counted out.

Their Sin Found Them Out.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 11.—Frank McGriff and Katie Zumpe were found dead from asphyxiation in a rooming house. Gas was escaping from a jet and the flames is thought to have blown out accidentally. The man came here not long ago from Clay City and he is said to have a divorced wife in that city. The Zumpe woman was married, and it is said that her husband, from whom she had separated, lives here.

Came Together Head-On.

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 11.—In a head-on collision between the Cherry Tree accommodation train and a freight train on the Cresson and Clearfield division, about a mile and a half from Cresson, two trainmen were fatally injured, six were slightly hurt, three locomotives were demolished, and two baggage cars and four loaded steel cars were wrecked.

WINTER BUTTERFLIES.

A Hardy Brood For Which Frost and Snow Possess No Terrors.

Coming in one day from a walk in a heavy snowstorm, I dropped upon the evening table some triangular brownish bits that looked at first sight like flakes of dried bark.

"What are those—chips?" "No. Butterflies."

Such a reply with a foot of snow on the ground and great probability of a foot more before morning was accepted as a pleasantry and not to be taken seriously. The idea of catching butterflies in a snowstorm seemed too "fishy" for serious consideration.

On the approach of winter most of the butterflies, those delicate little creatures of fair weather, naturally die. But among their number there is a whole hardy brood for which the rigors of winter possess no terrors. These are the angle wings, or vane-sides. They are frequently called "thaw butterflies" from the fact that during the warm spells of winter they awake from their torpor and may frequently be seen sunning themselves near their place of hibernation or if the weather is mild and pleasant flitting lightly about in the open places.

These insects pass the winter both as chrysalis and as mature butterflies. Normally they remain in the chrysalis form only about two weeks, but it is probable that the severe cold overtakes some before they are fully developed, which may account for some of them hibernating as chrysalis.—St. Nicholas.

Michelangelo.

Michelangelo stood in the front rank both as painter and sculptor. In both arts he was worthy of the highest praise. The fresco of the "Last Judgment" in the Sistine chapel is considered the most wonderful picture in the world, showing the omnipotence of artistic science and the fiery daring of conception that but few other paintings can even approximate. In sculpture the "Moses" and the "Slaves," not to mention other pieces, rang among the finest creations of the art and proclaim Michelangelo to have been as masterful with his chisel as he was with his brush.—New York American.

COURTING DEATH.

The Work of the Mounted Police of Canada in the Northwest.

The Northwest policeman's first duty is to die if that should be necessary. He is not allowed to shoot a desperado, go up, sit on his carcass, roll a cigarette and then read the warrant. He must not shoot. At all events he must not shoot first, which is often fatal, for if there is a time when delay is dangerous it is when you are covering an outlaw, writes Cy Warman in the Sunday Magazine.

Numbers of the force have been known to ride or walk into the very mouth of a cocked .45 Colt and never flinch. In about ninety-eight cases out of every hundred the man behind the gun weakened. In the other two cases he extended his lease of life, but made his going doubly sure. When a mounted policeman falls, the open space he leaves is immediately closed, for back of him stands the Dominion government and back of that the British empire. So the desperado who thinks he can kill and get away has a hard time.

If the police chase him out of the Dominion back to the islands, he is likely to fetch up at Scotland Yard. If his native village lies south of the forty-ninth, the Pinkertons take up his trail, and when all these forces are after a man his days are gliding swiftly by.

"Next!"

"I was counsel for a railway company in the west," says a prominent New York lawyer, "in whose employ a section hand had been killed by an express train. His widow, of course, sued for damages. The principal witness swore positively that the locomotive whistle had not sounded until after the entire train had passed over his departed friend."

"You admit that the whistle blew?" I sternly demanded of the witness.

"Oh, yes; it blew."

"Now," I added impressively, "if that whistle sounded in time to give Morgan warning the fact would be in favor of the company, wouldn't it?"

"I suppose so," said the witness.

"Very well. Now, for what earthly purpose would the engineer blow his whistle after the man had been struck?"

"I presume," replied the witness, "with great deliberation, 'that the whistle was for the next man on the track.'"—Harper's Weekly.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 11, 1908

Although "Uncle Joe" Cannon has expressed the opinion that "boys will be boys" he is not likely to overlook the fact that a good many become voters.

Foreign dispatches announce that the dotage of the aged monarch of Austria, Emperor Franz Josef, is to be enlivened by a young and pretty Morganatic wife, in the person of Kathie Schratz, a former court actress. This is another just such a case as is mentioned and described in the Old Testament in the first book of Kings, chapter one, verses one to four inclusive.

The New York World, one of the foremost and most influential Democratic papers in the United States, has just issued a 45-page pamphlet entitled, "The Map of Bryanism; Twelve Years of Demagoguery and Deceit; an Appeal to Independent Democratic Thought by the New York World." With maps and statistics it is shown that under Bryan's leadership the Democratic party steadily and continually lost ground from 1892, when they had a solid South and carried a great many Northern States until 1907, when nothing was left but only a part of the solid South. The pamphlet closes by saying that the vital fact confronts the Democratic party that Bryan cannot possibly be elected, and asks why he should receive the nomination.

The value of industrial education receives little consideration in the United States and statistics on this subject makes sorry reading. Take one comparison, for instance, that between Berlin and New York. In the former city fifty-five percent of all the boys between the ages of fourteen and fifteen are in industrial schools, which are a practical combination of training school and shop. When they leave these schools they are craftsmen in every sense of the word. In New York and other great cities of this country there are similar schools attended by only about one-tenth of one per cent of the young male population. Small wonder that most of the trade workers in this country are foreign mechanics. The American youth, after leaving school in a half-baked condition wants to earn a journeyman's wages at once without first passing through a tedious apprenticeship.

It seems to be pretty well settled that the Democratic party will declare for local option in its next State platform. This will certainly be a very advanced ground for the Democratic party to take on the liquor question, because the party was always considered the friend of the brewery and liquor interests. But while this may be an advanced ground for the Democratic party, it is not so for the Republican party. The Republican party always leaned toward temperance, not in a fanatical way, like the Prohibition party, but in a sane and sensible way, commensurate with the condition of the times in which we live.

The Democratic party may declare for local option, but only because it sees the handwriting on the wall—simply because it can't help itself if it desires to be up with the times.

We already have a law which is as good or perhaps better than local option. A majority of the voters of any township or ward may, by remonstrance, prevent the granting of a license to any applicant who may ask for one. This is practically local option, and all that is necessary is to put it in practice.

No other decision of the Supreme court of the United States has received such attention by the press as the recent decision touching the responsibility of labor unions which conduct a boycott.

This decision will certainly put an end to the boycott as hitherto operated by labor unions. It declares such boycotts to be combinations in restraint of trade within the meaning of the Sherman act, and subject to its penalties.

Such decision was to be expected whenever the question got fairly before the courts. Decisions resting on the same principle have been repeatedly given and not only by the American courts, nor only recently. They have been given for a thousand years whenever the courts of the English speaking peoples were careful to safeguard their immemorial liberties.

A conspiracy to take away that by which a man lives, to ruin his business and destroy his property, is a crime, whether concocted and carried out by millionaires in a private office or by artisans scattered over a nation. The crime is in the nature and purpose of the act and not in the wealth or poverty of the persons who commit the act.

These are truths which it is wholesome to be reminded, as the supreme court has reminded the haters' union and its allies. There can not be one law for men who happen to be rich and another for men who happen to be poor. There must be one law for all American citizens, else there can be no liberty.

And for all American citizens there is one law. Its substance and its meaning may be hidden for a time in dust raised by greed and maudlin sentiment. But the one law is there all the time, restraining all and protecting all, supreme in its majesty.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 11.—The political pot is beginning to boil among the Republicans owing to the near approach of the Republican state convention. E. E. Neal of Noblesville, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for reporter of the supreme and appellate court, has just announced his withdrawal from the race. George Self of Corydon, the present incumbent, now has a clear field for the place. He is an old soldier and probably will be the only Civil war veteran nominated this year in Indiana for state office. Although it has been the understanding that Representative John Edwards of Mitchell had retired from the race for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, it was said today that his name will be presented and that he has strong hopes of being nominated. Senator Fremont Goodwin of Williamsport, a candidate for lieutenant governor, was here yesterday conferring with his lieutenants, Chas. W. Miller of Goshen, former attorney general, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, has opened his headquarters in rooms at the Denison hotel. Miller has been making an active fight for more than a year. The candidates took their departure today for Wabash for the meeting of the Lincoln League of Indiana, which promises to attract Republicans from all parts of the state.

The race for the Democratic nomination for governor promises to be the most interesting thing that has happened within the party in Indiana for many years. This is the first time since 1896 that there has been more than one avowed candidate for the honor. In fact, it is an open secret that in certain instances since that year the Democrats in Indiana have been obliged to draft men for the state ticket. Nomination for various state offices was considered an empty and costly honor until this year. Now there are more candidates among the Democrats than among the Republicans. The action of the committee in fixing an early date for the convention will force the candidates to work day and night to get into the various counties before the delegates are named. Chairman Jackson today issued the call for the convention. The race for governor now lies between Samuel M. Ralston of Lebanon, Senator L. Ert Slack of Franklin, Thomas Marshall of Columbia City, C. K. McCullough of Anderson, and the Rev. Thomas Kuhn of Richmond. Senator Slack's official announcement has just been published, but he has been an active candidate for the last two years. He has spoken in half of the counties and has worked among the reform element in a very energetic manner. By the official call for the Democratic state convention, March 25 and 26, it is seen that there will be 1,371 delegates, based on an apportionment of one for each 200 votes cast for John W. Kern for governor in 1904. The winning candidates must have 686 votes in the convention. The first session will be held at 11 a. m. the morning of the 25th, when committees will be appointed. In the afternoon delegates to the national convention will be named by the district delegates. On the following day the state ticket will be nominated. This will be the first two-days' convention the Democrats have held in Indiana.

Governor Hanly is showing marked signs of getting into the state political game with some of his old-time vigor. He summoned to his office several of his appointees. It is not known definitely what purpose the governor has in view, as none of the politicians who were called to his office would talk about their visit. It was said that the governor went into the political situation in a very earnest manner and urged them to line up with him. It was learned today that the governor has written to his appointees throughout the state, asking them for lists of delegates that have been elected, and urging them to stand by him in the state convention. It is not known to what extremes the governor expects to go to nominate his friends, but the word went out today that all persons who are under obligations to him for any favors must get busy at once or explain their conduct.

The discovery has been made by the state board of medical registration and examination that several county clerks have violated the law of 1897 by issuing licenses to physicians who did not hold a certificate issued by the board. Letters have been sent to these clerks informing them that the licenses must be recalled. The board is trying to learn how many physicians are practicing illegally under licenses issued by clerks.

WASTED PRECAUTIONS.

A Spell of Worry and Anxiety That Went For Naught.

Ferguson was wending his uncertain way homeward, sorely troubled in his mind over the curtain lecture he knew was in store for him and casting about for some means of evading it. Suddenly a bright idea was evolved from his befuddled brain. He would slip into the house and get quietly into bed without awakening his wife.

Accordingly he stole gently upstairs, carefully undressed outside the door and crept into bed, with his face toward the outside.

He mentally congratulated himself upon his success thus far and went to sleep.

When he awoke in the morning he dared not look at his wife, and after lying still for a few minutes and not hearing any noise from her he concluded she was still asleep.

He then determined to arise very quietly, carry his clothes outside the door, dress there and go downtown to business without waiting for breakfast. He was successful in this, and, meeting the servant girl downstairs, he said:

"Eliza, you can tell your mistress I expect to be very busy today and therefore I didn't stay to have breakfast with her this morning."

"Laws, sir!" said Eliza. "Missis went away yesterday morning to her mother's and said she wouldn't be back till this evening."—London Telegraph.

ENGLISH JUSTICE.

Hard on Petty Thieves and Light on Wife Beaters.

It is only about a century since the death penalty was inflicted in England for theft not exceeding the value of a sheep. Now some of the London journals are making a merciless exposure of magistrates throughout the kingdom who keep up the tradition by sentencing petty thieves to jail while inflicting only trifling fines upon wife beaters and even more brutal offenders.

In one police court one defendant was fined 10s. 6d. for knocking his wife down in the street because she refused to give him money for drink, and another was sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment for damaging growing potatoes and stealing two footballs.

For cruelty to a horse, beating his wife, who was ill, with fist and hammer and leaving her with nothing to eat one man was fined 10 shillings, while another, charged with stealing a pair of socks valued at sixpence, got fourteen days' hard labor. It would not be difficult to make up a list of similar cases from American police courts, yet the tendency in America is rather toward a higher estimate of the value of human life.—Van Norden Magazine.

His Correspondent.

[Original.]

In the olden times, when things were not all ready made by millions, Joseph Sanger stepped into a store where a variety of things were kept on sale. There were embroidered articles for women, fancy articles for household use and lounging articles for men. The latter consisted of dressing gowns, smoking jackets, slippers and such other paraphernalia.

"I'm a bachelor," said the young man—"a lone, lorn bachelor. I am obliged to spend a great deal of time in my room, and I may as well be comfortable. What have you in the line of wearing apparel for such use?"

The shopkeeper squared himself and surveyed his customer with calculation in his eyes. "Yes; I think they will fit you," he said at last. "The very thing—a smoking jacket, cap and slippers, brand new, beautifully embroidered. I got them in only yesterday, but I will sell the lot very cheap." He produced the articles. The young man tried them on, and they fitted him fairly well.

"You say they are new?" he asked. "They look shop worn."

"Such things are made by fine ladies in indigent circumstances, who usually spend a great deal of time on them. I dare say they were a year or more in making. That accounts for their appearance."

Sanger bought the things for a song, took them home and the same evening put them on. As he saw himself in a mirror he thought them very becoming and a great bargain. Lighting a cigar, he sat down in his easy chair, feeling very comfortable. But notwithstanding that he was in fine apparel he was miserable. Who can be happy with nothing but walls to talk to? Thrusting his hands into the pockets of the jacket, he ran one of them against a bit of paper. Withdrawing it, he read:

The maker of this jacket would like to correspond with the purchaser with a view to matrimony.

"Well, now, I like that!" mused Sanger. "That woman has a long head. She knew there were even chances the things would fall into the hands of a bachelor, that the bachelor would wear them in a room all alone and want a wife. My dear, I'll go you."

He wrote a note and mailed it. It came back with postmen's notes scribbled all over it: "Try here. Try there. Try everywhere." Sanger, disappointed, threw it on his dressing case. But the next evening on returning from business it was missing. The maid told him that the postman had asked for it, having found a party to whom it might belong. A few days later a note written on fine paper and bearing a crest was laid on a table in his room. He opened it and read:

Since placing the note in the article you describe prosperity has come to me. Nevertheless I shall be delighted to find a man who has in him the elements of a good husband.

There was no mention of the writer's age. When Sanger replied, which he did at once, he said that his age was twenty-six. Before going any further in the matter he would like to know the lady's age. There was no reply to this, and, fearing that she might be sensitive about her age, he wrote again, giving the old quotation "with loving hearts age makes no difference."

Then came an epistle stating that the age of the lady who had placed the paper in the smoking jacket was forty-two. Sanger was much disappointed and forthwith committed the note to the wastebasket. He was not in need of marrying a fortune and did not propose on any account to marry a woman sixteen years his senior.

Meanwhile a lady acquaintance told him that she wished to introduce him to a young friend of hers. Sanger consented and met an attractive girl of eighteen, with whom he proceeded straightway to fall in love. His passion being reciprocated, an engagement ensued. When he was feeling the happiest a note came from his correspondent stating that she had looked up his record, was satisfied with it and was ready to make his acquaintance. Sanger paid no attention to the note. Presently he received another, stating that if he thought he could trifle in that way with unprotected women he was mistaken. The courts would do her justice.

Sanger was troubled. It appeared that he had been drawn into a trap by a woman for blackmail. She had his letters, though there was no offer of marriage in them, so he might as well write one or two more, trying to fix the matter up. The replies he got puzzled him. They seemed to have been written rather by a young girl than a middle aged woman. Indeed, there was something very unsophisticated in them. He finally determined to meet her and find out just what kind of an enemy he was fencing with.

He made an appointment to meet at a certain spot in the park. As he was about to keep it along came a letter from his fiancée asking him to come to her at that very hour. This was unfortunate, but he resolved to ignore the request. He went to the park.

As he approached the rendezvous whom should he see but his fiancée herself. He halted, but, having been seen by her, he approached. She stood laughing at him. When she had driven him to the verge of anger she explained.

Twenty years ago her mother wrote the note he had found in his dressing gown. His reply had fallen into her hands, and she had been his correspondent. She had secured the introduction and had since been amusing herself by continuing the correspondence. ROSALIE WHITING.

THE SENSIBLE COUGH CURE

There are kinds of cough remedies which are as bad as the coughs they are intended to cure. They stop the coughs sometimes, but they do it by doing just what a cough cure should not do and that is to dry up the secretions and to strifle the cough by means of opiates. A real cough cure should stimulate the secretions, heal the inflamed surface and cure by removing the cause.

Dr. BEHER'S EXPECTORANT cures in the right way. It has been curing coughs for years and we know of no way in which it could be improved. Our confidence in it is such that we sell each bottle under a positive guarantee. Price 25 and 50c.

Sylvia was changing. The characteristic amiability, the sensitive reserve, the sweet composure which the world had always counted on in her, had become exceptions and no longer the rules which governed the caprice and impulse always latent. An indifference so pointed as to verge on insolence amazed her intimates at times. A sudden, flushed impatience startled the habitués of her shrine. There was a new, unseeing hardness in her eyes, in her attitude the faintest hint of cynicism. For the first time a slight sense of fear tinged the general admiration.

In public her indifference and growing impatience with Quarrier had not reached the verge of bad taste, but in private she was scarcely at pains to conceal her weariness and inattention. That he noticed it was evident even to her, who carelessly ignored the consequences of her own attitude.

At the Mi-cro-mie dance given by the Sowa Hunt, Quarrier, who was M. F. H., led the cotillon with agreeable precision and impersonal accuracy, favoring her at intervals. She returned to town next morning with Grace Ferrall, irritable, sulky, furious with herself. All hot with self contempt, she lay back in the comfortably upholstered corner of the brougham, staring straight before her, silent red mouth unresponsive to the occasional inconsequent questions of Grace Ferrall.

"After awhile," observed Grace, "people will begin to talk about the discontented beauty of your face."

Sylvia's eyebrows bent still farther inward.

"A fretful face, but rather pretty," commented Grace maliciously. "It won't do, dear. Your role is dignified comedy. Oh, dear! Oh, my!" She stifled a yawn behind her faultlessly gloved hand. "Oh, dear, how I do yawn! And Lent only half over! Sylvia, what are you staring at? Oh, I see."

They had driven south to Washington square, where Mrs. Ferrall had desired to leave a note, and were now returning. Sylvia had leaned forward to look at Siward's house, but with Mrs. Ferrall's first word she sank back, curiously expressionless and white, for she had seen a woman entering the front door and had recognized her as Marion Page.

"Well, of all indiscretions!" breathed Grace, looking helplessly at Sylvia.

"She has courage," said Sylvia, very white.

"Courage! Do you mean foolhardiness?"

"No; courage—the courage I lacked. I knew he was too ill to leave his room, and I lacked the courage to go and see him."

"You mean alone?"

"Certainly alone."

"You dare tell me you ever contemplated—"

"Oh, yes. I think I should have done it yet, but—Marion!"

Suddenly she bent forward, resting her face in her hands, and between the fingers a bright drop ran, glimmered and fell.

CHAPTER TWELVE

SIWARD at his desk, over which the May sunshine streamed, his crutches laid against his chair, sat poring over the piles of papers left there by Beverly Plank some days before with a curt recommendation that he master their contents.

The curious persistence of youth in his features seemed unaccountable in view of the heavy marks imprinted there. In every movement, every turn of his head, there still remained much of that indefinable attractiveness which had always characterized his race—much of the unconscious charm usually known as breeding.

In men of Mortimer's fiber dissipation produced coarser symptoms—distended veins and sagging flesh—where in Siward it seemed to bruise and harden, driving the color of blood out of him and leaving the pallor of marble and the bluish shadows of it staining the hollows. Only the eyes had begun to change radically; something in them had been quenched.

That he could never hope to become immune he had learned at last when he had returned, physically wholesome, from his long course of training under a famous Irish specialist on the Hudson.

He had been a fool. He had imagined that he could control himself and practice the moderation that other men practiced when they chose. The puerile restraint annoyed him; his implied inability to master himself humiliated him, the more so because secretly he was horribly afraid in the remote depths of his heart.

Exactly how it happened he did not remember except that he had gone downtown on business and had lunched with several men. There was elated. Later he remembered another cafe farther uptown and another more brilliantly lighted. Gumble had found him again, this time in the area, and this time the same ankle, not yet strong, had been broken.

Through the waning winter days as he lay brooding in bitterness, realizing that it was all to do over again, Plank's shy visits became gradually part of the routine. But it was many days before Siward perceived in the big, lumbering, pink fisted man anything to attract him beyond the faintly amused curiosity of one man for another who is in process of establishing himself as the first of a race.

As for reciprocation in other forms except the most superficial or of permitting a personal note to sound ever so discreetly, Siward tolerated no such idea. Even the tentative advances of Plank hinting on willingness and perhaps ability to help Siward in the Amalgamated tangle were pleasantly ignored. Unpaid services rendered by men like Plank were impossible; any obligation to Plank was utterly out of the question. Meanwhile they began to like one another—at least Siward often found himself looking forward with pleasure to a visit from Plank. There had never been any question of the latter's attitude toward Siward.

Plank began to frequent the house, but never informally. It is doubtful whether he could have practiced informality in that house even at Siward's invitation.

One very bad night Plank came to the house and was admitted by Gumble. Wands, the second man, stood behind the aged butler. Both were apparently surprised.

That something was amiss appeared plainly enough, and Plank, instinctively producing a card, dropped it on a table and turned to go. It may have been that the old butler recognized the innate delicacy of the motive or it may have been a sudden confidence born of the necessities of the case, for he asked Plank to see his young master.

It was a bad night outside, and it was a bad night for Siward. The master vice had him by the throat. He sat there clutching the arms of his chair, his broken leg in its plaster casing extended in front of him, and when he saw Plank enter he glared at him.

Hour after hour the two men sat there, the one white with rage, but helpless; the other stolid, inert, deaf to demands for intercession with the arch vice, dumb under pleadings for a compromise. He refused to interfere with the butler, and Siward insulted him. He refused to go and find the decanters himself, and Siward deliberately cursed him.

Once toward morning Siward feigned sleep, and Plank, heavy head on his breast, feigned it too. Then Siward bent over stealthily and opened a drawer in his desk, and Plank was on his feet like a flash, jerking the morphine from Siward's fingers.

The doctor arrived at daylight, responding to Plank's summons by telephone, and Plank went away with the morphine and Siward's revolver bulging in the side pockets of his dinner coat.

He did not come again for a week. A short note from Siward started him toward lower Fifth avenue.

There was little said when he came into the room.

"Hello, Plank! Glad to see you."

"Hello! Are you all right?"

"All right. Much obliged for pulling me through. Wish you'd pull me through this Amalgamated Electric knothole, too, some day."

"Do—do you mean it?" ventured Plank, turning red with delight.

"Mean it? Indeed I do—if you do. Sit here. Ring for whatever you want, or perhaps you'd better go down to the sideboard. I'm not to be trusted with the odor in the room just yet."

"I don't care for anything," said Plank.

"Whenever you please, then. You know the house, and you don't mind my being unceremonious, do you?"

"No," said Plank.

"Good!" rejoined Siward, laughing. "I expect the same friendly lack of ceremony from you."

But that for Plank was impossible. All he could do was to care the more for Siward without crossing the border line so suddenly made free. All he could do was to sit there, rolling and unrolling his gloves into wads with his clumsy, highly colored hands, and gaze consciously at everything in the room except Siward.

On that day at Plank's shy suggestion they talked over Siward's business affairs for the first time. After that day, and for many days, the subject became the keynote to their intercourse, and Siward at last understood that this man desired to do him a service absolutely and purely from a disinterested liking for him and as an expression of that liking; also he was unexpectedly made aware of Plank's serenely unerring business sagacity.

As for the quid pro quo, Siward had insisted from the first on a business arrangement. The treachery of Major Belwether through sheer fright had knocked the keystone from the syndicate, and the dam which made the golden pool possible collapsed, showering Plank's brokers, who worked patiently with buckets and mops.

The double treachery of Quarrier was now perfectly apparent to Plank. Siward, true to his word, held his stock in the face of ruin. Kemp Ferrall, furious with the major and beginning to suspect Quarrier, came to Plank for consultation.

Then the defense formed under Plank. Legal machinery was set in motion, meeting followed meeting, until Harrington cynically showed his hand and Quarrier smiled his rare smile, and the fight against Intercounty was on in the open, preceded by a furious clamor of charge and countercharge in the columns of the daily press.

That Quarrier had been guilty of something or other was the vague impression of that great news reading public, which, stunned by the reiteration of figures in the millions, turns to the simpler pleasures of a murder trial. Besides, whatever Quarrier had done was no doubt done within the chalk marked courts of the game, though probably his shoes may have become a little dusty.

Siward, at his desk, the May sunshine pouring over him, sat compiling the heaps of typewritten sheets, striving to see between the lines some sign of fortune for his investments. Gumble knocked presently. Siward raised his perplexed eyes.

"Miss Page, sir."

"Oh!" said Siward doubtfully. Then, "Ask Miss Page to come up."

Marion strolled in a moment later, exchanged a vigorous hand shake with Siward, pulled up a chair and dropped into it. She was in riding habit and boots, faultlessly groomed, as usual, her smooth pale hair sleek in its thick knot, collar and tie immaculate as her gloves.

"Well," she said, "any news of your ankle, Stephen?"

"I inquired about my ankle," said Siward, amused, "and they tell me it is better, thank you."

"Sit a horse pretty soon?" she asked, dropping one leg over the other and balancing the riding crop across her knee.

"Not for awhile. You have a fine day for a gallop, Marion," looking askance at the sunshine filtering through the first green leaves of the tree outside his window.

"It's all right—the day. Where are your cigarettes, Stephen? Oh, I see. Don't try to move—don't be silly."

She leaned over the desk, her fresh young face close to his, and reached for the cigarettes. The clean cut head, the sweetness of her youth and femininity, boyish in its allure, were very attractive to him—more so perhaps because of his isolation from the atmosphere of women.

"It's all very well, Marion, your coming here, and it's all very sweet of you, and I enjoy it immensely," he said. "I'm horribly afraid somebody will talk about you."

"What would you do then?"

"I?" he asked, disturbed. "What could I do?"

"Why, I suppose," she said slowly, "you'd have to marry me."

"Then," he rejoined, with a laugh, "I should think you'd be scared into prudence by the prospect."

"I am not frightened," she said gravely.

Gravity fell upon him too. In this young girl's eyes there was no evasion. For a long while he had felt vaguely that matters were not perfectly balanced between them. At moments even he had felt an indefinable uneasiness in her presence. The situation troubled him, too, and, though he had known her from childhood and had long ago learned to discount her vagaries of informality, his common sense could not countenance this defiance of social usage, sure to involve even such a privileged girl as she in some unpleasantness.

"I'd be very glad to marry you—if you care to," she said.

"Marion!"

"Yes?"

"Oh—I—it is—of course it's a joke."

"No; I'm serious."

"But I—but you don't love—can't be in love with me!" he stammered.

"I am."

Gloved hands tightening on either end of her riding crop, she bent her knee against it, balancing there, looking straight at him.

"I meant to tell you so," she said, "if you didn't tell me first. So I was rather tired waiting. So I told you."

"It is only a fancy," he said, scarcely knowing what he was saying.

"I don't think so, Stephen."

But he could not meet her candor, and he sat silent, miserable, staring at the papers on his desk.

After awhile she drew a deep, even breath and rose to her feet.

"I'm sorry," she said simply.

"Marion—I never dreamed that—"

"You should dream truer," she said. There was a suspicion of mist in her clear eyes. She turned abruptly to the window and stood there for a few moments, looking down at her brougham waiting in front of the house. "It can't be helped, can it?" she said, turning suddenly.

He found no answer to her question.

Skating at the Kramer rink. Private party tonight.

Motion pictures and illustrated songs at the Vaude and Grand theatres to night and every night—five cents.

Manager Wolverton of the Grand theatre, has secured one of the season's big popular successes in "Bud Hicks, the Yankee Doodle Boy," which is announced as the attraction for Thursday, February 27th. This is a comedy-drama with music, affording a diversified entertainment consisting of music, song, comedy and drama.

The central figure, which is denoted in the title, is a clever Chicago boy, typical of the great city. He takes life easy and is happy with his twelve dollars a week which he earns in a brokers office. Of this he pays four dollars for board and the other eight he "fiddles" away for "glad rags," as he expresses it. You'll like him, every one does, because he is every inch a man. He is a little "nosey" and "butts in" to other people's affairs, but somehow you think more of him for it, and you'll agree with his sweetheart truly, when she says in the last act, "Bud you're the Candy Kid."

Ten big song hits are introduced throughout the action of the play; the scenery is gorgeous, in fact "The Yankee Doodle Boy" is a "real" show. See it.

CATGUT STRINGS.

The Way They Are Made From the Intestines of Sheep.

Catgut strings, it is well known, are made of the intestines of sheep. The intestines of the full grown animal are from forty to fifty feet long.

The raw material from the stockyards is first thoroughly cleansed of fat and fleshy fiber by dull knives arranged on a drum turned by a crank. The white tough membrane that is left is then handed over to the splitter, who dexterously splits the material into even strands by bringing it against the blade of a safety razor set upright in the table before him. The strands are then spun together and placed on the drying frames.

An American E violin string requires six strands, the European four. The strands, at one end fastened to an upright post, are twisted together while still damp and pliable by means of a spinning wheel. Taken from the drying frames, the strings are cut in lengths, coiled and boxed in oiled paper for shipment. To polish the strings very fine emery paper laid on a grooved aluminium block is used. While the strings are still on the drying frame the covered block is passed over the strings, polishing as many at one time as there are grooves in the block. It can be seen that in the manner in which the strands are twisted the effect of polishing is to weaken the string.

In the essential features the process of making the fine gut strings for surgical uses or the heavy strings three-eighths of an inch thick sometimes employed for machinery belting does not differ from the method employed in the case of the musical strings except that the latter are handled with more care.—Chicago Record-Herald.

DARING PHOTOGRAPHY.

Perilous Feats of the Men Who Manipulate the Cameras.

A man who can stand or sit on the flange of a steel beam not so wide as the sole of your shoe and 600 feet above a roaring granite paved city street, there coolly to take successful pictures of the top of the city far below him, must be possessed of three qualifications and each of the first water. He must have judgment, patience and courage, these three, and, one may add without slighting the other two, the greatest of these is courage. So writes H. G. Hunting in the Technical World Magazine.

The eager eye of the camera goes everywhere nowadays, and the man who makes picture getting his business adopts no peaceful, unexciting pursuit. If he is under contract to a great newspaper or magazine he may be called upon to secure a picture of anything, from a flashlight in the black depths of a metropolitan sewer to a portrait of the fairest white slave in a Turkish harem. He may be asked to "get" a female grizzly nursing her whelps in her mountain lair to illustrate some naturalist's work at one end of the year, and before the other end has come he may snap a shutter on the lip of some smoking volcano's crater.

When you see a striking or a startling picture of man or beast in some extraordinary place or pose, do you ever stop to think where the photographer was who made the negative or how he got there?

WHICH STORY DO YOU WANT?

The Daily Republican wishes to ascertain which of the following stories is desired for the next serial to be published after the present story, "The Fighting Chance," is finished. The story receiving the most requests will be printed next and the other stories in order of standing. Send us your preference by card, phone or personal call before February 17th. Following is a list of a few of the stories we can secure for publication in the Republican.

The Mystery

By Stewart Edward White and Samuel Hopkins Adams. To the worth of this story there are two substantial tributes—first, that it was run as a serial by the London Sphere, a publication noted for its discrimination in the selection of serials and which rarely uses an American story; second, that "The Mystery" was one of the "good sellers" of 1907. This is a story of mystery and adventure on new lines. The style is graphic and forceful as the "copy" of a skillful reporter of an important news event. The part of the hero, unfolds gradually until he stands revealed as the rarest combination of whimsical humor and cool courage ever presented, perhaps in fiction. The narrative, which conveys the impression of reality, not fiction, is swift and alluring, holding the interest of the reader as with hooks of steel.

His Courtship

By Helen R. Martin, author of "Tillie: A Menonite Maid." In the main this story is a record of the adventures of a young Doctor of Philosophy, who conspires to play the humble role of hired hand at Mr. Morningstar's farm boarding house that he may have opportunity for serious and scholarly meditations and avoid the blandishments of fascinating young lady boarders. The resulting complications make a story as rich in humor, as provocative of laughter as any that has been written in recent years. The characters are as interesting as one's intimate friends.

The Plow Woman

By Eleanor Gates, author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl." A story of the winning of the west; of the ways and wiles of the savage Sioux; of brave soldiers and daring frontiersmen; of a stubborn hate coming down from the civil war; of love tender, brave and true. He who reads shall know that a tale of Dakota of thirty years ago may kindle and inspire as much as any story of times remote; that the days of romance are near, not far off. The narrative begins quietly and rises steadily in interest to a climax as absorbing and inspiring as has been presented in any novel or drama, old or new.

Richard the Brazen

By Cyrus Townsend Brady, author of "The Southerner," "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc., and Edward Peple, author of "A Broken Rosary," "The Prince Chap," etc. In "Richard the Brazen" we put before the reader a knight errant worthy of the best days of chivalry, though he is of the present, and we find him in the garb of a cowboy. The superb courage with which he rescues from certain death a young woman whom he had never before seen, and the reckless daring with which he risks his reputation in attempt to win this woman under an assumed name, will appeal strongly to every lover of romance and admirer of courage. How Richard prospered in his enterprise under difficulties which would discourage any but the most stout hearted we leave the reader to find out, and a most delightful pastime it will prove.

The King of Diamonds

By Louis Tracy, author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillar of Light," etc. Gripping the reader fast with its tale of the astounding transformation, in one day, of a ragged, London waif into the possessor of incalculable wealth, this story by Louis Tracy measures up fully to the standard of this romancer's other popular tales. In the unfolding of the story he depicts not merely the change in the hero's material circumstances, but the interesting development of his character. The stirring adventures in which Philip Anson became embroiled by reason of his suddenly acquired riches, literally sent him from heaven, his loyalty to the girl friend of his childhood and his manly devotion with Mr. Tracy's well known skill.

Red Saunders

By Henry Wallace Phillips. This is the famous story of Red Saunders, big Red, tough Red of the plains and mines. We shall follow this expansive man through his days of toughness and sinfulness up to the great day of his life, the day that shall bring the metamorphosis of Red. This trumpeter will not give the story away by indicating how this transformation shall come about—whether through the remorse or repentance of Red, his conviction of sin, his fear of the damnation of the wicked, his yearning for the peace that passeth understanding, or whether it shall be the love of woman that shall bring this giant to his knees and make him as a little child. The trumpeter will only promise that this conversion of Red shall be one of the most interesting and delicious episodes in all fiction, which the reader will enjoy, and doubtless, remember through all the years of his life.

NO TIME TO LOSE

According to Mr. Hobson We Are Going to Need a Greater Navy.

CONGRESS FOR ECONOMY

President's Big Naval Program Rejected In Committee by Vote of 13 to 5.

Instead of Four Big Battleships There Will Be But Two Provided For.

Washington, Feb. 11.—By a vote of 13 to 5, one member absent and not voting, the house committee on naval affairs rejected the president's recommendation that congress at this session authorize the building of four battleships at a total cost of $38,000,000, and by a unanimous vote there was included in the navy appropriation bill an authorization for the construction of two to cost $9,500,000 each and to be of the Delaware type.

These representatives voted in accordance with the president's recommendations: Lilley of Connecticut (Rep.), Thomas of Ohio (Rep.), Meyer of Louisiana (Dem.), Talbot of Maryland (Dem.), and Hobson of Alabama (Dem.).

Representative Hobson announced after the committee meeting that he intended to make a minority report recommending authorization for four battleships. "But the authorization, merely, is not enough," he said. "It should include an actual appropriation so that the work of construction would begin without a moment's unnecessary delay. Even so it would be three years before these vessels could be made ready to go into commission; and this country has no time to lose."

The naval appropriation bill as amended and agreed upon by the committee carries a total appropriation of $101,000,000 for the navy establishment for the next fiscal year, about $24,000,000 less than was asked for in the department estimates. Under the head of new authorization for whose fulfillment congress is bound to appropriate money at the next session if the bill as recommended passes the house and senate, the committee included two battleships to cost $19,000,000; ten destroyers, $8,500,000; eight submarine torpedo boats, $3,040,000, a total of $30,540,000, or $3,730,000 less than the total for new authorizations asked for by the navy department.

The new authorization estimates rejected by the committee comprised the following: Two battleships, $19,000,000; four scout cruisers, $10,000,000; one ammunition ship, $1,750,000; one repair ship, $2,000,000; two mine-laying ships (cruisers to be converted), $500,000.

The committee, however, raised from four to eight the number of submarine torpedo boats asked for; held over for further consideration and incorporation in a special bill the matter of providing fleet colliers; appropriated $400,000 for the purchase with in the discretion of the secretary of the navy of three so-called sub-surface torpedo boats, their acceptance by the government to be contingent upon the fulfillment of department requirements; and included an appropriation of $1,000,000 to enable the recruiting of 3,000 additional enlisted men to man newly completed battleships, and authorized the recruiting of 3,000 more to become available after the first of July, as recommended by the secretary of the navy and urged by the president. No provision was made for the building of a drydock at Pearl Harbor, near Honolulu.

The four submarine torpedo boats, by the adoption of an amendment offered by Representative Lonsdale of New Jersey, are to be of the Octopus type in accordance with the report of the Marix board, before whom last year's tests off Newport were made. The effect of this amendment if the house and senate concur in the committee's report may be to nullify the court decision by which the secretary of the navy gained the right to consider the Lake type of boats as an after competitor.

Mob Overcomes Militia. Brookhaven, Miss., Feb. 11.—After having confessed to attacking Nellie Williams, a white girl, Eli Pigot, colored, was lynched here. Pigot was brought to Brookhaven to stand trial. The local militia was ordered out to protect him. When the train came the girl's father crowded close to the cars to get a look at the man. A soldier knocked him down and the enraged crowd swept the militia aside, dragged the negro from the car, riddled him with bullets and hanged him to a telephone pole.

Missourian Heads Committee. Washington, Feb. 11.—James T. Lloyd, representative from the First district of Missouri, was last night elected chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, defeating his rival, Representative William H. Ryan of the Thirty-fifth district of New York, by a vote of 23 to 14. Representative Frank Clark of the Second district of Florida was unanimously elected secretary of the committee.

An Artist's Search.

Mark Hammond, American artist in Paris, was lounging one morning after breakfast in his studio before beginning his day's work. He had received a newspaper from home and, as was usual with him on the receipt of home papers, he read every word, including advertisements. Suddenly he started. His eye had lighted on the following advertisement:

If Marcelline Blanche Cutter will communicate with Griffin, Hastings & Ham, Temple court, New York city, she will hear something to her advantage.

Now, there was an especial reason why Mr. Hammond should be moved by this advertisement. Some months before he had needed a table for his studio and had purchased one of an artistic pattern in a secondhand furniture shop. There was a drawer in it, but no key. For awhile the purchaser was content to let the drawer remain closed; but, finally needing it, he fitted a key and opened it. It contained a few old papers so eaten by mice that he could make nothing of them. There was an envelope—no letter in it—partly destroyed. An address was on it, or the remains of one, as follows:

Marcelline B.
43 Rue du C.
Paris

Hammond threw the contents of the drawer into a wastebasket, but the same evening, needing a bookmark, he took out the envelope for the purpose and used it till he had finished the book, leaving the envelope in the last place marked. The name Marcelline is an unusual one, and Hammond had had it before him for a matter of ten days. He dropped the paper he had been reading and reached for the book. There was the envelope with the incomplete name and address. What was left of the address was plain except the first, a sole remaining letter giving the name of the street. It is printed here as a C, but there was that on its lower end to suggest that it might be something else.

Hammond was interested. Nevertheless it was the hour when, fresh after a night's sleep, he did his best work, and he took up his palette and brushes. In ten minutes he threw them down, took his hat and went out to find a city directory. There were dozens of in Paris whose names begin with C, and dozens that began with every other letter that might begin with C and a tail to it—a Q or a G, for instance. Hammond muttered something about the fool killer taking him and went back to his work. This time he succeeded in remaining at his easel till his breakfast (luncheon in America), after which he began a hunt that took up all his leisure time for weeks.

Having made a list of all the streets in Paris whose names begin with C, Q and G, he gave several hours a day to hunting for Marcelline Cutter. He judged that she was a lady and confined himself to the best streets till he had exhausted them, then with but little hope began on the poorer ones, lighting at last on 43 Rue du Gendreau, a dingy street near the Church of St. Sulpice. A girl of twenty responded to his knock. She was shabbily dressed, but comely.

"I am looking for Marcelline Cutter," said Hammond.

"My mother is Marcelline Cutter, and I am Mabel Cutter."

Hammond knew his search was ended. Mother and daughter had lived where he found them for years. The daughter worked in a bookbindery near by. It was an old story of a marriage for love, including a runaway, and without forgiveness. Marcelline Seymour married Edgar Cutter, an Englishman. There were no means in either family, but Cutter secured a position in an American banking house in Paris, died and left his widow and daughter penniless. Mrs. Cutter was at a loss to know why she was inquired for. It could not be for an inheritance, for she knew of no relative who had means to bequeath her. The advertisement emanating from America indicated that she was sought for by the Seymours rather than the Cutters.

Hammond left the two to send their address to New York and settled down again to his work. A month passed, when there was a rap on his studio door, and two ladies entered. Beneath their altered dress he recognized the Cutters. Then they gave him the sequel to his search. Edgar Cutter had a brother Hugh, who had worked his way from England to Colorado. There he prospected, mined, struck a bonanza and became very rich. He hunted for his brother, but could gain no trace of him except that he had married Marcelline Seymour. Dying childless, Hugh Cutter left his property to his brother and his brother's wife and children, if any, on condition that they were found within a year after his own demise. If not the property was to go to his cousin, a resident of the place in England where the family had long lived. The year would have expired within six weeks after the date on which Hammond began his search.

Mrs. Cutter begged Hammond to name some way by which she might recompense him for his trouble and reward him for saving her and her daughter a splendid inheritance. Hammond, though but a poor artist struggling to paint pictures worthy to be hung in the Salon, declined to accept any compensation. He, however, decided to return to America with the Cutters and on arrival there was persuaded to go with them to Colorado and become active in securing their inheritance. He finally accepted a considerable reward in the person of Mabel Cutter, whom he married.

A MERE FORMALITY

Ohio's Primaries Today Are Altogether One-Sided.

Columbus, O., Feb. 11.—Primaries for the selection of delegates to the Republican state convention, which meets in this city March 3, are being held this afternoon. In fifty-two counties in the state the primary is merely a formality, and no actual voting is being done. In these counties there is but one list of delegates in the field, and under a recent ruling of the Republican state central committee, it is not necessary to vote unless there are two contesting tickets. The one list of candidates will be certified as having been elected. There is voting in the remaining thirty-six counties because of local political conditions, but in only two of these is actual opposition to the endorsement of William H. Taft for the presidency being made. These counties are Knox, where seven Foraker men are running as independents, and Cuyahoga, where the Foraker people have a complete list of delegates.

The ballots for the primaries in Cuyahoga have been prepared under the supervision of a county committee composed of Taft adherents which the Foraker people have sought to have declared illegal, contending that their committee is the only one under which the primaries can be properly held. The fight between the contesting county has been brought up in the supreme court, and if the court declares against the Taft committee, other primaries will be held later.

AFTER THE BLACK HAND

Pittsburg Police Make Important Capture of Italians.

Pittsburg, Feb. 11.—Antonio Folino and the seven other Italians, alleged members of the Black Hand society arrested in a raid Sunday night, following attempts to blackmail a son of the late Senator Quay and other residents of Zwickley Heights, are being held in prison for further hearing after letters and literature found in the house they occupied has been translated. This branch of the organization is known to the police as the Camorriste. Police assert that a school to train young men in the wiles of extortion and the best methods of taking human life was found in session when detectives arrested the leader, Folino, with his assistants and students at the rendezvous.

Translations of the papers found in the shanty of Raffelle Peluso near Zwickley last week, reveal interesting side-lights of the Sacro Coricaco society, another branch. The oath of death of this society is as follows:

"With my life I swear everlasting allegiance to the Sacro Coricaco society. Her interests shall be my interests. I swear to do for her whatever the great hand shall order. I pledge myself to take whatever life is necessary for our great and illustrious tribunal of death, and if I fall at any time I swear to present myself for sacrifice by brothers."

IN THE INTEREST OF SCHOOL CLUB

Series of Lectures will be Given This Week at Graham Building

NOTED LECTURER COMING

Under the Auspices of the Classical Club, an Organization of Latin Students

BY PROF. J. H. SCHOLL

"The Classical Club" an organization of students of Latin in the high school has secured an entertainment entitled, "Rome, the Eternal City," a magnificently illustrated portrayal of the city of the Caesars. This organization has for its object "to promote interest in the study of classical subjects." Therefore there is a two-fold purpose in securing the entertainment—first, for the benefit of the pupils in the Latin classes, giving a better understanding of the subject, and second, to apply whatever funds maybe made to the purchase of pictures and statuary appropriate to the decoration of the Latin room.

Col. C. H. French, of Cleveland, Ohio, who will give the lecture, has given entertainments for the schools in many cities. Last week he was at Indianapolis, where he has given his entertainments for several seasons.

The schools will take advantage of this opportunity to add to the school room decoration and library funds by giving two entertainments on the afternoon of Thursday, Feb. 13th, for the benefit of the grade schools, giving an exquisitely beautiful illustrated portrayal of the Wonderland of the world, "Yellow Stone National Park."

We have seen persons who have seen these entertainments and we feel justified in recommending the same to the pupils and patrons of the public schools as worthy of their patronage from an educational standpoint, and we are sure that every one will approve of the purpose of the funds to be raised.

Tickets will be sold to grade pupils for the afternoon entertainments at 10 cents each; adults at either entertainment, 15 cents. Admission at night 15 cents. Hours for the entertainment are as follows:

Yellowstone National Park—3:30 p. m., grades one to four and adults; 5:00 p. m., grades five to eight and adults.

"Rome"—8:00 p. m., high school and adults.

The entertainments will be held in the assembly room of the Graham high school.

Goes After Germs.

How Hyomei Does its Work in Curing Catarrh.

The natural way of curing disease is always the scientific way, and the scientific way of curing catarrh is the hyomei way, with Hyomei.

Catarrh is a germ disease and is not cured only by using Hyomei, the treatment that reaches and destroys all catarrhal germs.

Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, the Hyomei medication reached the most remote air cells of the nose, throat and lungs, going after the catarrh germs wherever present, destroying them and preventing their growth, thus curing the disease.

Johnson's drug store sells Hyomei under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction. Begin its use at once. The cost of a complete outfit is only $1.00.

Benj. Parker At 75

Benjamin S. Parker, of New Castle, one of the foremost poets of Indiana, and the father of Jet Parker, manager of the Knecht clothing store in Rushville, celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday yesterday. He penned the following verses, apropos of the occasion:

When I was a lad I was told
That I'd probably never be old;
"You lack muscle, your frame is too light
To last long in life's hard, truceless fight."
So they said, and, each recreant word
Seemed the saddest a boy ever heard.

Well, today I'm seventy-five
And still glad to be young and alive,
And as ready to sing a glad song
As in morning's sweet days that were long.

Or, as life unto life speeds away,
Let my spirit respond ev'ry day
With a note, that in nothing offends,
The dreams of my youth and old friends;

So here's to old friends and to new,
The cherished, time-tested and true.
Wise age, laughing childhood: "Let's shake,"

One and all, and be friends for love's sake
And repeat this old toast o'er and o'er,
"Here's to friends who have gone on before."

He is one of the most popular men in this city and has a wide acquaintance throughout the county. It is Mr. Jay's advent into active politics as a candidate, but he has every qualification of a successful politician. Mr. Jay is a native of Wayne county and formerly practiced dentistry at Richmond. He removed to this city when he married Miss Mate Powers, daughter of John Powers.
